REDS MEDDLE IN LEBANON

RUSSIA BLACKMAILING UNITED STATES?

Military conflict brings grave results

LEBANON BATTLING VITAL ISSUES; SERIOUS THREAT TO MIDEAST PEACE

Beirut - The military conflict that has torn Lebanon during the last 10 days has raised to the surface the social and political divisions of this country and brought it face to face with the issues of survival, says Dana Adams Schmidt of the New York Times. It has also raised a grave threat to peace in the Middle East. On one side is a 20,000-man Lebanese army, on the other some 4,000 Palestinian commandos.

The commandos, goes the report, in their effort to wring from Lebanon major concessions that would grant them a much more favorable position for raids against Israel, took the offensive last week. A large force based in Syria crossed the Lebanese border in the region of Yanta (see map) to clear a new supply route to their forward positions in southern Lebanon. They need this line of communication because their old one over the mountains soon will be made impassible by winter rains and snow.

CREATED BY FRENCH

The composition of the Lebanese Army, created by the French even before the country's independence in 1943, mirrors one side in the country's division between Maronite Christians and Moslems. Christians joined the army and became cadets at France's St. Cyr military academy because they saw in the army the very symbol of the individuality and independence of Lebanon.

Today these Christians, property owning, educated, French-speaking, the original people of "Mount Lebanon" are the officers of the army. In the ranks are mostly Moslems.

EQUIPMENT ANTIQUATED

The army's equipment is antiquated, except for 12 Mirage jets purchased from France just before the 1967 war. One high officer observed: "We don't really want more modern equipment. Our task is mainly internal. We have no intention of fighting the Israelis unless we have to."

If Lebanon were to let the commandos have their way on this issue, the Israelis would have a case for claiming that Lebanon has abandoned the 1949 armistice in which Israel recognized the southern border of Lebanon. The Lebanese fear the Israelis would launch powerful retaliatory raids against Lebanon if Beirut gives the commandos a freer hand.

In this country of 2.2 million people half the population is Christian, and 90 percent of the Christians back the President. Many of the remaining 10 percent are for the commandos, and include men like George Habbash, head of the Palestine Front for the Liberation of Palestine, who is a Greek Orthodox.

On the Moslem side, which is for the most part on the side of the commandos, 45 percent of the pople are Sunnis, 35 percent Shiah and the rest Druse. The Sunnis and Shiah are the two great branches of Islam. The Druse are an exotic offshoot of Islam.

BACK THE COMMANDOS

Ninety-five percent of the Sunnis back the commandos. Among them is to be found the revolutionary potential of Lebanon. They are the poor and disinherited who resent the fact that the Christians occupy the best positions in government and industry and are generally better educated and more prosperous. These are the people who resent the system and are willing to smash it. Many of the Shiah, however, make common cause with the Christians. The Druse are a result of a calculated decision by Mr. Arafat that now was the time to try to open up a new front against Israel.

Unfortunately for Lebanon there are among the commandos elements who do not want a solution. They are the revolutionaries who see political and social revolutions as their ultimate aim, even beyond the liberation of Palestine. This element among the commandos knows that if there is no solution in Cairo, then sooner or later Lebanon might break up.

It is this possibility that worries Washington and frightens Nasser. It could conceivably result in intervention by the United States and the Soviet Union.

FREEDOM OF MOVEMENT

The commandos, of course, are not satisfied with that. They want complete freedom of operation from bases just behind that 1949 armistice line. The current conflict has ensued. It has come to a head at this time, in the opinion of close students of the commandos, as they split, with the majority following the leftist leadership of Kamal Jumblatt, an ardent admirer of the commandos.

Moslem leaders headed by Rashid Karami, the caretaker Premier, support the commandos but not without qualifications. Except for a few extremists they do not want to tear the country apart.

ISRAEL HAS CHANGED

Tel Aviv.-The elections to Israel's seventh Knesset (Parliament) were different from all previous polls in this country. They were held in another atmosphere—and there definitely is no doubt the new generation of voters has made its mark upon the country, its life, its political future.

I remember the other Israel which chose its first Parliament on that cold January day of 1949.

I arrived there on a plane which had taken three days' flying time from Geneva to Lydda, with stopovers in Nice, Athens and Nicossia. Some obscure South African outfit operated those outmoded, dangerous machines. (But who cares about such trivial things when one is young?)

What did perturb me, though, was the prevalence of internecine feuds and Ben Gurion's campaign of hatred against the Irgun leaders who barely had emerged from the underground as the Herut Party.

Ben Gurion at that time was virtually dictator of the new state. He could have introduced then the electoral reform to prevent sixteen parties from competing for Parliament seats. Yet it had suited him to tolerate—even to encourage—the corrupt system of his Party in order to assure his domain.

After twenty years there still are the sixteen or so political groups vying for control of Parliament. These relics of the Zionist Congress parties still are alive. However, I dare predict this last to have been their final feast.

Dosh of Maariv, genius among Israel's cartoonists, ran a beautiful caricature of this political system.

He depicted a cake sliced into eighths. Of these, seven already are in the hands of the old parties; they are the so-called "secure" seats. The lone eighth is left for the elector. Yet this one slice of which the voter can dispose tells the story of the latest election.

Despite the tremendous popularity of Golda Meir, her Party—the alignment of the Labor Party with Mapam—lost the absolute majority held in the former Knesset.

The Alignment consists of four factions: Mrs. Meir's own Mapai, a moderate Social-Democratic group; Rafi, the Party of Moshe Dayan; Ahdut Haavodah, the more-to-the-left Party of Yigal Allon; the extreme left Mapam.

The first three, all pro-Western and anti-Communist, became one Labor Party; the fourth, the Marxist Mapam which had compromised itself by its pro-Soviet flirtations in the past, refused the merger but did align itself for the elections with the Labor Party.

Moshe Dayan had opposed this "alignment". He was proven right. Many in the leadership of the Labor Party now say that Golda Meir would have had a complete majority had she opposed the "alignment". And Mapam would have gone down to defeat without this attachment to Labor.

The Herut-Liberal ticket conducted a hard campaign. It had to face three "nationalist" splinter groups opposing its pro-coalition policy. Yet it emerged strengthened, stronger than ever, from this campaign.

The National Religious Party, which is part of the Government, proved to be more popular among the Orthodoxy than the opposition, Agudat Israel. This indicates the will of the Israelis to continue at this time with the government of national unity.

What does this election mean in practical terms?

Within the Labor Party, Moshe Dayan's position will be stronger.

If the coalition government remains in power, Dayan and Begin together will be able to impose their policy. The Labor Party must face now the possibility that the Dayan forces will not accept the policies of the Mapam defeatists. The Party could be split should there be negotiations of a kind that Begin would oppose.

Last but not least, now the Government can deal seriously with the problem of changing the electoral system, bringing it closer to a two-three party regime. Four years from now there will be a new generation of voters that certainly will not favor retaining the old Zionist Congress-tradition of factionalism.

There will be a change.

OBTAINS STRONGER VOICE IN ISRAELI PARLIAMENT.-Itzhaq Raphael, leader of the National Religious Party, a winner in the recent Knesset elections, who emphatically insisted his party would not enter the race without Gahal.

In the final results, the Labor Party Alignment got 50-60 seats; Gahal 26; National Religious Party, 12.

Wants U.S. to force Israelis to get out

by M. J. Nurenberger

On the eve of the announcement that the Secretary of State for External Affairs, Mitchell Sharp, will tour the Middle East, the editor of The Canadian Jewish News visited several countries. Following is a resume of his impressions from Jerusalem this week:

The Russians are trying to blackmail the United States into forcing Israel to retreat. The Reds say they will not cease intervening in Lebanon unless the United States pressures Israel. And the Israelis won't fall into the trap.

ISRAEL PESSIMISTIC ABOUT LEBANON

The Israelis do not believe that the Lebanon crisis has ended. Therefore the country is determined to continue the policy of national unity.

When Secretary of State for External Affairs Mitchell Sharp arrives in Jerusalem next week, he will find Israel more united and increasingly determined especially now after elections.

GOVERNMENT GETS STRONG SUPPORT

In fact, the Government of National Unity is all the stronger with the influence of Herut, of which Menahem Begin is the leader, and the National Religious Party of which Moshe Shapira and Itzhaq Raphael are the leaders.

The last election has given the National Religious Party and Herut the strength of representation in Parliament.

This week on Tuesday, Prime Minister Golda Meir admitted to Begin that, following their conversations, it is apparent the influence of both the National Religious Party and Herut will be stronger while that of Mapam will diminish.

WON'T BUDGE

The new government of Israel will be one which will continue the policy of "no retreat without secure borders." This determination of the Israelis was expressed in the last election.

THE HON. MITCHELL SHARP'S ITINERARY

Tuesday, November 11th: Arrives in Tel Aviv.

Wednesday, November 12th: Leaves for Jerusalem, 8:30 a.m. There at 10:00 a.m., he will make courtesy calls to President Shazar and Prime Minister Golda Meir. Later he will lay a wreath on the grave of Theodore Herzl then call on Foreign Minister Eban with whom he will lunch. The afternoon will be devoted to further talks.

Thursday, November 13th: Back to Tel Aviv whence he will proceed to Mahanaim (in northern Israel); lunch in Nazareth followed by the drive back to the city along the coast road.

Friday, November 14th: Tour of the Weizmann Institute of Science in Rehovot after which he will fly to Cyprus.

Dayan:

FAIR TRIAL FOR ALL; NO COURT, NO JUSTICE

Haifa (JCNS).- "Whoever says 'Let's pray for an empty court' is praying for a desolated Golan," Moshe Dayan, Defense Minister, said at the inauguration of the first Israeli civil court in Kuneitra recently.

He added: "Where there is no population, there is no need for a court. Where people dwell, there are differences of opinion, there is dynamic life, economic and political, and in all phases of progress a court is necessary. Where there are no courts, there is no justice."

Yacov Shapiro, Minister of Justice, said: "It is of symbolic significance that an ignominious act on an international scale is being committed by the election of Syria to the Security Council on the same day as an Israeli court is opened on the Golan Heights."

The ceremony also was attended by judges, the O.C. Northern Command, Druse leaders, representatives of Golan settlers and many guests.

Judge Moshe Nacht, Director of Courts, said that in Kuneitra courts would operate on two levels: as a magistrates court; as a court of appeal. The first would be chaired by Chief Magistrates Yacov Bar-Zeev of Tiberias, the second by a panel of three judges under president Yosef Bahalul, president of the Nazareth District Court.

NO MORE KOSHER MEAT

Ernakulam (JCNS).- With the departure of the 80-year-old communal shochet for Israel, the eleven Jewish families, all that remain of the ancient Jewish community of Cochin, have no shochet for meat and are divided over the merits of the remaining poultry shochetim.

There are many of the latter but almost all are not Sabbath observers and, what is more, do not know the halakha. One who was licensed on giving his pledge that he would observe the Sabbath later became a non-observer. Half the community accepts poultry killed by him. The other half eats neither meat nor poultry.

DOCTORS URGENTLY NEEDED

Jerusalem (JCNS).- The Jerusalem Labor Council has issued an emergency call for 15 doctors. It announced that the Histadrut's Kupat Holim (Medical insurance fund) was forced last Sunday to shut down three of its neighborhood clinics because of a shortage of nine general practitioners, three children's doctors and three specialists in various fields.

In addition, the Council pointed out that 200 doctors in Jerusalem were approaching, or already were beyond, retirement age and that replacements were needed urgently.

Guarding the nation

GROUPS FORM TO FIGHT TERROR

Haifa (JCNS).- Thousands of Haifa people queued early at recruiting offices to enrol in Israel's proposed Home Guard on the British wartime pattern following the series of terrorist explosions which killed two people and injured 15 recently.

The first recruits of old age pensioners began watch duties immediately after the outrages. They are inspecting the courtyards of buildings and looking under cars and into dust bins every morning and evening.

The "guards" are unarmed, but they wear armbands and they may ask anyone to produce means of identification.

There also is increased vigilance by the public. Police are receiving many more telephone warnings; they conduct inquiries into every one.

The Arab population in this mixed city is uneasy at the suspicions of the Jewish majority. The discovery that there has been contact between the terrorist organizations and Israeli Arabs has, however, undermined the implicit confidence which existed between the two communities, despite the protestations of loyalty by prominent Arabs and appeals by Israeli leaders, including that of Abba Eban, Foreign Minister.

Police announced recently the discovery of a large quantity of arms, ammunition and sabotage equipment. They included Soviet-made handgrenades, submachine-guns and detonators.

The announcement also said that 84 Arabs from Haifa and Galilee had been remanded, including 14 taxi drivers.

Meanwhile, the city is paying some $3 million compensation for the terrorist damage. It also has housed 17 of the 24 families who were victims of the explosions in hotels at public expense until temporary apartments are found for them.

The houses at Kiryat Sprinzak must be rebuilt at Government expense but repairs to the others are expected to be finished within a few weeks.

FRANCE INTERESTED IN TALKS WITH BIG THREE

Paris (JCNS). - France called last week for the earliest possible resumption of talks with Britain, the United States and the Soviet Union on the Middle East crisis, declaring that developments in the Lebanon made an Arab-Israel settlement "more urgent than ever."

In a statement after a meeting of the Cabinet, the Government spokesman said the French Government was following events in Lebanon with attention and hoped that the crisis could be settled peacefully.

He added: "The Government is not unaware that the prolongation of the Arab-Israel conflict is the source of the grave troubles that affect this region of the world.

"It therefore feels it more urgent than ever to arrive at a just and durable settlement of this conflict."

TURNING ON THE CHARM.-New York's Mayor John V. Lindsay (seated), who wastes no time showing how to woo a "Jewish" vote. He is seen in discussion with Brooklyn's Lubavicher Rebbe.

Lindsay may make it. At the closing of this issue, it seems possible. Can Canadian candidates match him?

JOINS ARGENTINA

BRAZIL INCREASINGLY ANTISEMITIC

Rio de Janeiro (JCNS).- Argentina is not the only Latin American country which has a number of medium and small Jewish communities where assimilation is making rapid inroads. Brazil is another case in point, as illustrated by the situation in Belem, some 1,600 miles from Rio de Janeiro, in the State of Para, David Markus, the JCNS-CJN correspondent here reports.

There are about 300 Jewish families in Belem (Portuguese for Bethlehem) - the oldest community in Brazil - where there have been Jews for close to 300 years - longer, some say.

Most of Belem's community are of Moroccan origin with a sprinkling of East European Jews from Russia and Latvia. The community includes a number of very rich individuals as well as some who live entirely on welfare payments.

Very few families have not outmarried but twice a year they meet in their two synagogues. On Yom Kippur, only fully Jewish families are seen at the services with their children. On Lag b'-Omer, those who have married out also attend with their children.

Nevertheless, there is a Jewish school in Belem, the Kislanov School with 200 pupils and a well organized Zionist youth group.

The spiritual leader of the Belem community is 101-year-old Isaac Pinhas Melul who emigrated from Tangier to Brazil at the age of 18 and has been in his present post since 1916.

He also acted as reader at one of the synagogues and mohel (one who circumcizes) for very many years. He has nine children, 26 grandchildren and 22 great-grandchildren.

Only five weeks away, the 1969 Negev Dinner promises to be the most productive in Canadian history from the point of view of subscriptions and the establishment of family projects through JNF Foundation.

IN ISRAEL

Histadrut will build aeronautical electronic center

The United Organizations for Histadrut, in conjunction with the Golden Jubilee Committee of Histadrut, has decided to raise $50,000 to build a new wing for aeronautics and electronics in the already established trade school in Tiberias bearing the name of Senator David Croll. This latest project will fill an essential need in Israel's technological development. Through the Histadrut their names will be linked with Israel's progress and security.

JULIUS CIECHANOWSKI, president, United Organizations for Histadrut.

The present goal of building an aeronautical center, which is a special project to honor the Golden Jubilee of Histadrut in Israel, will be one of the crowning achievements for this organization which is made up of societies, landsmanshaftens, folk organizations united by their interest and devotion to Israel's needs.

The UOFH have to their credit many projects in Israel. They have erected a research center in the Kaplan Hospital in Rehovot sponsponsored jointly with Beth Sholom Congregation the Rabbi Monson Cultural Center in Or Yehuda; it helped build the Senator Croll trade school in Tiberias. In the past year the organization was active in the campaign which realized $60,000 for the border kibbutz Ashdod Yaakov to rebuild a cultural center destroyed by the Al Fatah. An ambulance for this kibbutz also was sent. In addition, hundreds of Amal Scholarships were provided which enabled large numbers of Israeli youth to acquire essential skills in technical trades.

They are justly proud of their record of support for the many causes served by Histadrut. Their accomplishment is living proof of what average people, workers, small businessmen and folksmenschen can do through concerted cooperative effort. Through the Histadrut they are lending a hand to the great task of building the modern state of Israel; they are contributing to the education and training of the young in skills vital to the country both in peace and for defense.

In all of these projects the Women's Council of the UOFH has taken an active part.

With the interest and enthusiasm the organization has shown in the past, there is every reason to believe that this new endeavor also will meet with utmost success.

Fighting units increased

Tel Aviv (JCNS).- Israel's Armoured Corps has doubled in size since the Six Day War. New units have been formed during the past two years and new gadgets fitted to improve the performance of armoured vehicles now in service.

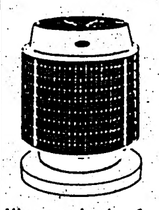
Notice to Homeowners

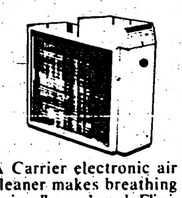
Order Carrier central air conditioning during our under-busy season.

Get a $200 rebate. In cash!!

Our business is over-busy in the spring and summer, under-busy in the fall and winter. We want to even things up a little. So if you'll order a Carrier central home air conditioning system before December 1, Carrier will send you a $75 cash rebate. Order a Carrier electronic air cleaner and you'll get a $45 cash rebate. Order a Carrier humidifier and you'll get a $20 cash rebate.



Illustrated, the famous Carrier round air conditioner. It locates in the garden and is designed to blend in with shrubbery. Almost silent in operation, it requires little maintenance and is most economical.

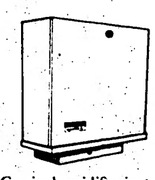


A Carrier electronic air cleaner makes breathing easier all year 'round. Eliminates pollen, relieves hay fever sufferers, removes allergy-provoking dust and mold spores.

Order all three together and you'll get a total rebate of $200.

Now, these rebates aren't a discount off some list price that nobody ever pays anyway. This is real, genuine cash sent to you by Carrier as a reward for doing business with us when things are normally quiet. And your cash rebate has nothing to do with the total purchase price, the size of your house, or anything.

To have us contact you and give you a price on these installations, please call the number below. But Hurry! If this deal catches on, our under-busy season may become another over-busy season.



A Carrier humidifier installed on your furnace or on nearby ductwork is the most efficient way to keep a home from drying out during the winter. If you take advantage of your Carrier under-busy sale, your humidifier can be installed quickly, to give you maximum benefit this winter.

The reception resulted in a substantial total in new Israel Bond purchases by members of the Construction Division which will be reflected in the total subscribed by this key industry in support of Israel's economic survival.

Associated drive reaching peak

At an enthusiastic campaign meeting held yesterday, officers and campaign workers of the Associated Building Campaign, encouraged by favorable results reported on the campaign to date, girded for a strong push during the month of November to put the campaign over the top.

Officers of the Associated Building Campaign pointed out that the month of November is a crucial period for the success of the campaign. A special report dinner meeting has been scheduled for all campaign workers which will take place this coming Wednesday, November 12th, 6 p.m. at 3630 Bathurst Street.

A feature of the dinner will be the appearance of one of the young graduates of the Senior Day High School who, speaking on behalf of the youth, will stress the importance of the campaign objectives.

To date, fifty percent of the objective has been raised. Oscar Shainhouse, campaign chairman, and Joseph Levine, president of Associated reported that the community responded generously to the Capital Building Campaign of Associated to raise funds for the Finch Avenue school building. This response is due to the widespread esteem enjoyed by the school throughout the community and to its great achievements in the area of Jewish and general education over a period of many decades.

Despite every effort at maximum economy, because of the sharp rise in costs of construction and financing the objective will have to be higher in order to erect the school of 28 classrooms and ancillary rooms as originally planned.

The new school will help relieve congestion in the main school on Bathurst Street; it will effect economies in administration due to costs presently incurred in renting various facilities to accommodate the overflow.

Pressure on space in existing facilities also is partly due to the growth in enrolment in both the Junior and Senior Day High Schools which is now approaching 500. Total enrolment in Associated Day and Evening Schools is approximately 2,600.

United Jewish Welfare Fund of Toronto has approved the Campaign of Associated.

A FASHION BONUS FROM ISRAEL TO WOMEN BOND PURCHASERS

FASHION BONUS

Thursday, November 27th, is Israel Fashion Day in Toronto for hundreds of women purchasers of Israel Bonds who will be able to share in the pride of increasing status for Israel's fashion industry in the fashion centers of the world. The occasion will be the gala climax event on the Women's Division calendar which will take place in the Centennial Ballroom of the Inn on the Park in the form of a glamorous luncheon and presentation featuring the best in Israel couture and ready-to-wear.

Miss Kay Burns, widely known international authority on fashion, beauty and charm, will be the guest commentator, adding yet another high fashion note to the exciting collection of costumes to be modeled. Creed Furs of Toronto are coordinators of the presentation.

Eligibility to attend the luncheon is based on the purchase by a woman of a minimum of $250 in State of Israel Bonds in 1969. Through the medium of this event, and the many Tribute Dinners and Sponsor functions which have preceded it during this year's campaign, the Women's Division anticipates that it will more than surpass its target of $1,500,000 in Israel Bonds sales to women.

Already noted as textile producers, the Israelis have been gradually molding a unique fashion image. In the 21 years of its statehood, Israel has seen its knitwear, leather and fur styles rise to the top of the list of fashion exports.

The Israel Bond collection proves that fashion is by no means a mirage in the desert country. Israel is a fashion oasis offering novel fabrics, quality tailoring and a cross-section of classic contemporary and traditional styling.

ITZHAK RABIN, Ambassador of Israel to the United States, who has issued a strong call for increased Israel Bond support from Toronto Jewry; the community which impressed him so deeply on his visit here by the strength and determination of its loyalty to the people of Israel.

"We hope we have the right to turn to you," he said, in part, "to ask you to be with us. We know that it will require a lot of patience, a lot of readiness and a lot of participation– not for one year, for many years. We believe in you, and we will never lose our faith in you."

"...Israel's chances for peace CAN be advanced through your assistance in providing increased ressources for the country's economic progress and development."

AMBASSADOR RABIN: "WE TURN TO YOU TO HELP US WIN THE STRUGGLE FOR PEACE"

Itzhak Rabin, Ambassador of Israel to the United States, has issued a strong call for increased Israel Bond support from Toronto Jewry–the community which impressed him so deeply on his visit here by the strength and determination of its loyalty to the people of Israel.

"We hope we have the right to turn to you, to ask you to be with us. We know that it will require a lot of patience, a lot of readiness, and a lot of participation, not for one year, for many years. We believe in you, and we will never lose our faith in you."

"It is the side that will show more determination, more endurance, more faith, that is going to win in this struggle. There are no shortcuts. There is a hard road ahead and there must be hard work until a real solution is achieved.

"Despite the present conditions of siege and tension, Israel's chances for peace CAN be advanced through your assistance in providing increased resources for the country's economic progress and development," Israel's great military leader and diplomat stated. "There is only one way to make clear to our neighbours that there is no hope in continuing a policy of war and violent activities. We must show that, even under these conditions, Israel will prosper and develop. Even if the present conditions last three, five, ten or fifteen years, we must prove that we will not only be able to maintain ourselves, but will be able to continue developing Israel in the economic field, in the social field, in the educational field, and in the scientific field."

To achieve an immediate and substantial improvement in Israel's financial position, the flow of CASH from Israel Bond purchases must be accelerated. Time is a crucial factor for Israel. There must be no interruption of essential development projects to keep the economy strong despite all pressures. For this reason, all Israel Bond subscribers who have not yet paid for their purchases are urged to make whatever sacrifice is necessary to assure Israel that the steady surge of loan dollars will continue from Toronto at a record pace.

CONSTRUCTION LEADERS HELP BONDS BUILD ISRAEL.-A smiling group of participants at the cocktail reception which took place on October 30th at the home of A. Ephraim Diamond in conjunction with the First International Dinner saluting the Construction Industry tell the story of highly successful results for Israel Bonds. Key leaders in the industry and allied trades announced substantially increased purchases of Israel Bonds in response to the stirring message presented by Ira Hirschmann, financier, diplomat and renowned author.

Shown here, left to right, are: D. Lou Harris, national chairman, State of Israel Bonds of Canada; George Goldlist, dinner chairman for the First International Dinner which took place on November 5th; Albert J. Latner, tribute committee chairman for the dinner; Ira Hirschmann; A. Ephraim Diamond, reception committee chairman.

IN ISRAEL'S CAUSE.-Mr. Emanuel Shimoni (left), Counsellor of the Embassy of Israel in Ottawa and a distinguished member of Israel's diplomatic corps, who will be guest speaker at the cocktail reception hosted by Walter Bick on Thursday, November 13th, at the Beverley Hills Hotel, in conjunction with the Food Industry Dinner honoring Israel Shopsowitz. Born in Johannesburg, South Africa, Shimoni immigrated to Israel in 1955 and served as director in a number of key government ministries including Education and Culture, and Foreign Affairs.

George Flesch (center), a former member of Israel's Knesset and a leading authority in the field of Foreign Affairs, who will address the guests at a reception honoring Dr. Norman W. Shaul to be held at the home of Philip Schwartz, Thursday, November 13th. This event will be an advance effort for the gala Tribute Dinner honoring Dr. Shaul being tendered by Clanton Park Congregation which has attracted the enthusiastic participation of congregation members and leaders in the Orthodox Synagogue Division of State of Israel Bonds.

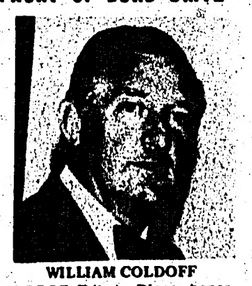
Dr. Arieh Plotkin (right), noted lecturer, expert on Middle East Affairs and former officer in the Israel Defense Forces, who will provide an "inside" view on Israel's current world situation when he addresses the guests at a reception honoring Bert Godfrey on Wednesday, November 12th, at the home of Ralph Milrod. Later this month, Beth Tzedec Congregation will honor Mr. Godfrey at an Impressive Tribute Dinner in cooperation with State of Israel Bonds at which Mr. Milrod will serve as dinner chairman. Through this advance effort and the dedication of Beth Tzedec members to the cause of Israel Bonds, it is expected that the $1 million target in Bond sales will be reached for the first time in Beth Tzedec history, during the 1969 campaign.

B'NAI B'RITH IN FOREFRONT OF BOND DRIVE

Toronto B'nai B'rith Lodges are playing an ever more important role in the Israel Bond structure of community organizations, reaching out and attaining unprecedented totals in Bond sales to members and business associates, sparked by Tribute Dinners honoring B'nai B'rith leaders in their respective lodges. In addition to the large and old-established lodges, more and more of the young new lodges are joining the B'nai B'rith Bond effort through special events.

Major dinners on the B'nai B'rith calendar:

EGLINTON LODGE Tribute Dinner honoring LOUIS L. FENKELL, Thursday evening, November 13th at the Primrose Club with EMIL COHEN as guest speaker; YORKDALE LODGE Tribute Dinner honoring JACK BUCHMAN, Saturday evening, November 15th, at Beth Tzedec Synagogue at which EMIL COHEN will appear, by popular request; EMPIRE LODGE Tribute Dinner honoring HAROLD SIEGAL, Q.C., Tuesday evening, November 25th, at Sutton Place Hotel, where JOEY ADAMS, celebrated actor, author and goodwill ambassador for the United States will be guest speaker; UPPER CANADA LODGE Tribute Dinner honoring HY LAMPERT, Thursday evening, November 27th at Beth Tzedec Synagogue; TORONTO



WILLIAM COLDOFF

LODGE Tribute Dinner honoring ALFRED GREEN, December 11th.

In conjunction with all these events, numerous advance cocktail receptions are scheduled with prominent lodge members as hosts, and distinguished guest speakers presenting informative and inspiring addresses on Israeli affairs. Among these advance receptions is one honoring Harold Siegal, Q.C., of Empire Lodge, which will be hosted by William Coldoff at his home. Guest speaker on this occasion will be the prominent Chicago attorney and communal leader, Mr. Jerry Elliot, who heads the Speakers Bureau of the Chicago State of Israel Bond Organization.

COMING EVENTS

Forthcoming special Bond events of wide community interest are the following: BETH EMETH BAIS YEHUDA CONGREGATION: reception hosted by BARNEY BARENHOLTZ, November 8th, in honor of DAVID ANISMAN, Tribute Dinner honoree for the congregation. Guest speaker will be MR. PINCHAS SHANAN of the Embassy of Israel in Ottawa. CHENSTOCHOVER SOCIETY–Bonds Breakfast, Sunday, November 9th, with DR. NORMAN W. SHAUL, Chairman, Synagogue Division, State of Israel Bonds of Toronto, Guest Speaker. NORTH YORK LODGE B'NAI B'RITH–reception at Isaacs Art Gallery Sunday, November 9th, with guest speaker, HARRY FRANK, Chairman, Executive Committee, State of Israel Bonds of Toronto.

FOOD INDUSTRY DIVISION–Reception at the home of ISRAEL SHOPSOWITZ, on Monday evening, November 10th, in advance of the First Annual Food Industry Dinner at which MR. SHOPSOWITZ will be honored later this month.

TORONTO LODGE B'NAI B'RITH–reception at the home of ALFRED GREEN, on Thursday evening, November 13th, in appreciation of the honor being accorded him at the Toronto Lodge Tribute Dinner to be held in December. Guest speaker at MR. GREEN'S reception will be MAX SHECTER, Past President, District #22, B'nai B'rith.

BETH EMETH BAIS YEHUDA CONGREGATION–Tribute Dinner honoring DAVID ANISMAN to take place on Saturday evening, November 15th. MR. IRA HIRSCHMANN will be guest speaker. A musical program will be highlighted by the performance of the gifted tenor PAUL SHELDON.

TORONTO HADASSAH-WIZO–Tribute Luncheon honoring MRS. BEN (VERA) WALKER, Thursday, November 20th, at Shaarei Shomayim Synagogue. Rabbi Balfour Brickner will be guest speaker.

DON MILLS LODGE B'NAI B'RITH–Reception at the home of JACK GWARTZ, Thursday evening, November 20th. MR. HARRY FRANK will be guest speaker.

SHARP TO THE MIDDLE EAST

CANADA'S ROLE

The mission to the Middle East by Canada's active Secretary of State for External Affairs will be followed by many with both sympathetic attention and desire for success.

Knowing Mr. Mitchell Sharp's independent mind and aware of Prime Minister Trudeau's tendency to ignore cliché pictures of given situations, we feel confident our Foreign Minister will be able to detect the contours of the Middle East puzzle—if not its very core.

We hope, when in Israel, Mr. Sharp takes a good look at the young nation, dedicated to the pursuit of peace yet coerced into a war for the defense of its very life by foreign intervention. He also may wish to observe closely the 8,000 Arabs in the Old City of Jerusalem who defied terror by participating in the last elections to the municipality of the united Jerusalem. Furthermore he may want to compare the standard of living of Arabs in Israel with that of those in countries which feed their peoples imported guns instead of bread.

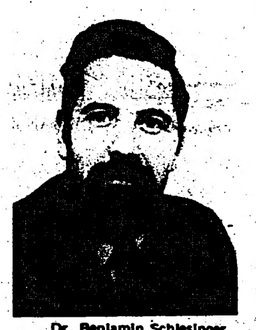
Last but not least, Mr. Sharp may notice the fallacy of those who maintain that Israel tolerates attack and terror because of weakness and because of high moral principles.

We are sure Mr. Sharp will seek an indication to the road to peace. We hope he discovers it.

THE STEADY GROWTH OF A MIGHTY LITTLE NATION

by Dr. Benjamin Schlesinger

During my stay in Israel last summer, I became interested in the immigration to Israel, a small country of 2,780,500 people, which has admitted Jews from all over the wold.



Dr. Benjamin Schlesinger is professor in the School of Social Work at the University of Toronto.

IMMIGRATION:
FACTS & FIGURES

Israel's Proclamation of Independence declares: "The State of Israel shall be open to Jewish immigration and the ingathering of exiles." This declaration was given legislative expression by the 1950 Law of Return, which gave all Jews everywhere the automatic right to settle in Israel and become its citizens.

The Jews had continued to live in the Land of Israel from Biblical times, even under the most adverse conditions. In 1882, when aliya got underway, there were about 24,000 Jews in the Land of Israel. The number grew to 85,000 by 1914, and then dropped to 56,000 in 1918 as a result of the deportations and privations of World War I. From 1919 to 1948, the years of the British administration, about 452,000 came, bringing the total, with natural increase, to 650,000 at the time of the establishment of the State. From May 15, 1968 until the end of 1967, another 1,286,254 Jews came to Israel from more than 90 countries, and in the past year another 25,000-30,000 have come.

During May-August, 1948, with the War of Liberation raging, 33,000 came. Another 70,000 arrived in the next four months -- mostly Holocaust survivors from the displaced persons camp in Germany, Austria and Italy. This mass immigration continued until the end of 1951.

Almost entire communities of Jews were transplanted to Israel: more than 37,000 of Bulgaria's 45,000 Jews; 85% of Libya's 35,000; all but about 1,000 of Yemen's 45,199; nearly 122,000 of Iraq's 130,000; more than two thirds of Poland's 145,000; one third of Rumania's 350,000.

The overwhelming majority of the 687,855 immigrants who came by the end of 1951, as of the 650,000 who have arrived since, came from what has been called the "lands of stress." In other words, in addition to coming out of the positive pull of the re-establishment of the free, sovereign Jewish State, they were also motivated by the negative push of various factors: there were the Holocaust survivors who wished to have nothing more to do with Europe; there are the Jews in certain co7ntries where the defeat of Nazism and fascism in World War II failed to stamp out the traditional antisemitism, and there are the Jews of many Arab and Moslem countries. Today, in addition to the 2 - 3 million Jews of Soviet Russia, from where there has never been more than a small trickle of Jewish immigration, under the family-reunion scheme, there remain an estimated quarter of a million Jews in the "lands of stress."

WESTERN IMMIGRATION

With the temporary decline in "stress" immigration, the Jewish Agency found it possible to start devoting its thought, energy and resources to the question of "free" immigration -- that is, the immigration of Jews from countries where they do not, as Jews, suffer political, social or other disabilities at the hands of the regimes, and where they are free to leave, if they wish, and settle in Israel out of a variety of positive motivations. This question became all the more pointed as a result of the Six Day War.

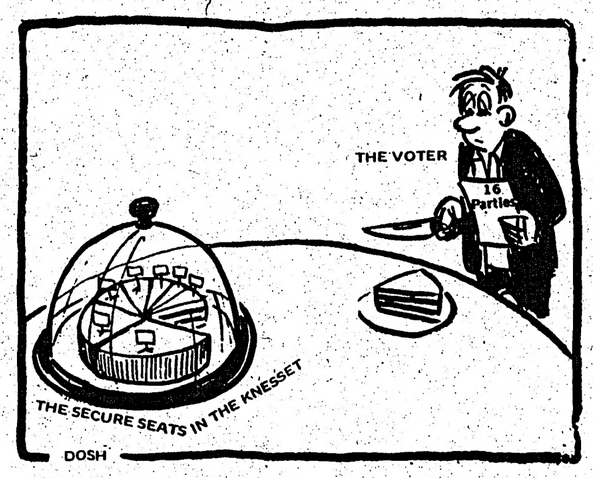
During the crisis of May-June 1967, when Israel was threatened with annihilation, there was an unprecedented rallying of material and moral assistance to Israel on the part of not only Jews who had always more or less actively participated in some aspect of Jewish life and more or less strongly supported Jewish causes generally and Israeli causes particularly, but also of large numbers who had thought they had long since renounced their interest in and concern for things Jewish.

For many of these, the awakening of 1967 meant also an awakening to the possibility of settling in Israel. This was followed in 1968 by the founding of the "Aliya (Immigration) Movement" in a number of countries, whose members are those who have committed themselves to immigrate to Israel within three years of their joining. The Movement has 6,000 members in the United States, South Africa, England, France, Canada, Argentina, Australia and Belgium.

For the Jews of the "free" world aliya depends on positive, inner motivations. In addition, however, they must also know that they will be able to find in Israel jobs that are in keeping with their training and experience; housing that reasonably approximates what they are used to; suitable schooling for their children, etc. All this calls for a special effort on the part of the Israel Government and the Jewish Agency in providing suitable facilities.

A first step in this direction was taken in 1956, when the Jewish Agency started setting up hostels for these immigrants. They could stay in the hostels -- actually small-scale hotels -- for up to six months and even a year while they studied Hebrew at special ulpanim, looked for jobs, decided where they wanted to live and explored possibilities and generally learned the conditions of life in Israel. Today there are 11 such hostels, including those for students from abroad, in seven localities, with a capacity of 1,762 beds. Most of them have facilities for families as well as single persons. In addition, there have recently been set up 10 "absorption centers" with a capacity of 3,160 beds. There are also three dormitory-ulpanim in three towns, with 322 beds; 38 kibbutz ulpanim with 1,426 beds and 20 newly established kibbutz ulpanim with 800 beds. Now under construction are 11 new hostels or centers or additional wings at existing ones, with a total added capacity of 2,752 beds. Six additional ones are in the planning stage, with a total of 2,675 beds.

Also in 1967, the Government-Agency Authority on Immigration and Absorption was set up, with the aim of centralizing both the planning and the implementation of policy. The Authority worked out various proposals, since enacted into law, for facilities to new immigrants in the areas of customs, taxation, housing, school and university tuition fees, etc. For example, an immigrant technician, doctor or craftsman may, in addition to his household effects, bring his equipment and tools without an import permit and free of import duties and purchase tax. In his first three years in Israel, he is exempt from travel tax if he goes abroad; receives graduated income tax exemptions (a married man with two children pays no tax on his first $4,500 of income during his first 18 months in Israel). Immigrants are exempt from the considerable high school tuition fees, and university education is free, during their initial years in the country.



TOGETHERNESS

by Ephraim Kishon

One evening not long ago, as we sat quietly fuming over the literary supplements, there was a sudden ring at the door. The little one immediately jumped up, hurried over to me and said:

"Go, open the door!"

Complying, I found the Grosses treading the doormat, Dov and Lucy Gross, a nice, middle-aged couple -- in slippers. They introduced themselves and apologized for disturbing us at such a late hour:

"We're from across the street," they said, "may we come in for a moment?"

"Please . . ."

They went straight to the living room, circled the piano and stopped in front of the tea-trolley.

"See?" Lucy Gross scoffed at her husband triumphantly. "It's not a sewing machine!"

"All right," Dov answered, purple in the face with anger. "You win. But on Tuesday, I was right, they have no Encyclopedia Britannica . . ."

"I didn't mention any Britannica," Lucy flared up. "All I said was 'Encyclopedia' and that they are terrible snobs."

"It's a pity we didn't record what you actually said."

"It certainly is a pity."

I realized that a fight was brewing, so I proposed we all sit down and settle the argument as becomes enlightened adults. Dov took off his raincoat and remained in striped blue pyjamas and pointed towards the high-rise building on the other side of the street. "We live there, on the fifth floor. We've got superb field glasses, bought them last year in Hong Kong . . ."

"Yes," I said, "the Japanese are making fantastic things."

"Maximum enlargement, one to twenty!" Lucy fiddled with the curlers in her hair, "we can see the smallest detail in your flat. So, yesterday Dubi behaved like a stubborn mule and swore that the dark object behind the piano was a sewing machine. I bet him it wasn't, since I could clearly see a flower vase on top of it. In the end I said to Dubi: 'You know what, we'll go over to them and check who's right'!"

"You did the right thing," I asured them, "otherwise there would have been no end to the argument. Any more problems?"

"Only the curtain," Dov sighed. "If you draw the flower-pattern curtain in front of your bedroom window, we can hardly see your toes . . ."

"There's a draft, believe me that's the only reason."

"I'm not complaining," thus Dubi. "You don't have to consider us. After all, it's your house."

Rapport had definitely been established. The little woman served salt sticks and tea.

"I'm dying to see whether the chewing gum is still there," Dov remarked, fingering the underside of the table. Red, if I'm not mistaken . . ."

"Nonsense," Lucy said, "it was yellow!"

"Red!"

They started fighting again. It was rather embarrassing; can't civilized people talk to each other for five minutes without quarrelling? It so happened that the gum was green, that is, they are not 100 percent reliable.

"Last night your guest stuck it there," Dov explained. "That tall, well-dressed man. When your wife went to the kitchen, he looked around to see that nobody was looking . . ."

"How nice," the little one giggled, "you really see everything."

"We have no TV at home," Dov explained, "so we have to look for local entertainment. I hope you don't mind."

"No, of course not."

The little one served crackers and fruit.

"Better watch that man in the singlet who cleans your windows," Dov remarked. "He uses your deodorant in the bathroom."

"You mean you can even see into the bathroom?"

"Just a little bit of anyone standing under the shower."

"And what does it look like?"

"Very little action."

They also warned us of the fat baby sitter who comes in after the Sabbath.

"As soon as the kids fall asleep," Lucy disclosed, "she retires into your bedroom with a student in spectacles."

"How's the reception in the bedroom?"

"Not bad, only the flower-pattern curtain is a nuisance, as I told you."

"Is the light adequate?"

"To tell you the truth, not quite." Dov admitted. "Sometimes we see only your contours in the bed. And of course, photography is out of the question . . ."

"The light is only for reading," I apologized. "We do a lot of reading in bed."

"I know, I know," thus Dov. "All the same, sometimes we're quite furious if you must know."

"Dov," Lucy remonstrated with him, "why must you pick on them?"

She told us that her favorite scene was in the evening when the wife goes in to little Rina and gives her a hearty goodnight kiss on her chubby bottom.

"It's a real pleasure to watch," she waxed enthusiastic. "Last Sunday we had a very nice couple from Canada, both of them are interior decorators, and they, too, agreed that they had hardly ever seen a more touching sight. They promised to send us a real telescope on a tripod, one to forty . . ."

"My husband also wanted to buy one of those Japanese microphones you direct at windows," Lucy related, "but I said to Dubi, 'Let's wait until we can afford something real good' . . ."

"You're so right," I said, "one should never skimp on equipment."

Dubi got up and brushed the crumbs off his pyjamas.

"We are so glad to have met you in person, too," he said cheerfully and whispered in my ear discreetly: "Watch your weight, old man, you've got a real paunch."

"Thank you."

"You're welcome," Dubi said. "If I can be of help, why shouldn't I?"

"And if it's at all possible, the flower-pattern curtain."

"Of course."

We promised to go on seeing each other, and a little while later a light went up in the house opposite. Dubi's noble figure appeared on the look-out, toting the Hong Kong field glasses. We waved to him, and I think he waved us on.

"Nice people," the wife said. "So informal."

"Yes," I agreed, "we seem to have established excellent communications with them."

JEWISH CRITIQUE WITH FLAIR

AFTER THE TRADITION
by Robert Alter
Dutton 256 pp.

For many years it has been a widely accepted truism that Jews are gifted with critical minds. This has been seen to be particularly apparent in the great number of Jewish writers who are active in the North American literary scene.

A perusal of the best sellers' list in the New York Times, or any other barometer of readers' interests, will inevitably show the presence of books by Jewish authors.

A great deal of attention has been devoted in the recent past to the creative Jewish writer, that is, the person who writes novels, short stories, poetry, and drama. These are the writers who receive the most attention and admiration -- and in the case of one or two, most of the money.

However, there has been very little commentary published on the contributions of Jews in another area of literary creativity. And I am one who feels that the word "creativity" must be interpreted in the broadest sense possible. A superior work of criticism is as valid a creative act as a finally wrought novel or poem. Critics may receive much less publicity than their novelist colleagues, but they are indisputably among the most important people working today in the vineyards of literature.

These prefatory comments have been made in order to introduce the reader to a Jewish critic who has reached a plateau of creativity equal to anything achieved by the great novel makers. Robert Alter's collection of essays in After The Tradition is in the finest tradition of literary criticism. Only one other Jewish critic can be compared to Alter, George Steiner of Cambridge University. But Steiner does not have the depth of Jewish learning and sensitivity which Alter has.

Professor of Comparative Literature at the University of California, Berkely, Robert Alter presents the reader with a comprehensive overview of Jewish literature covering a wide chronological period, and a vast geographical area. He ranges from one end of the literary spectrum to the other; from the Yiddish to the German, to the Hebrew; from the secular to the mystical to the apocalyptic.

Among the authors whom Alter analyzes and dissects are: Elie Wiesel, S.Y. Agnon, Bernard Malamud, Saul Bellow, S. Yizhar, and a host of other lesser names.

One of the most interesting chapters in Alter's book is called The Apocalyptic Temper. Now this is an essay which ostensibly deals with certain tendencies in Jewish literature. But in order to prepare his ground for the critical analysis, the author finds it necessary to delve into the basic difference between Judaism and Christianity. This he does by differentiating the apocalyptic tradition from the prophetic tradition. The former he equates with Christianity, and the latter with Judaism. Utilizing Buber, Alter succeeds admirably in showing the cataclysmic and unwordly nature of the Christian apocalyptic vision of life. He contrasts it with the hard-headed, down to earth approach of everyday existence which characterizes Judaism.

This latter illustration is an example of the way in which Robert Alter has shown himself to be a critic of extraordinary talent. He has the ability to explore dimensions of the Jewish mind that very few other writers have. His book is full of insights and appreciations, and of course trenchant criticisms of Jewish literature.

It is not an easy book to read, but it can be a labor of love to explore it.

Letters to the Editor

PROTESTS CJN REPORT

Dear Editor:

Re: the article, Montreal trouble, labeled "all facts" (The Canadian Jewish News, October 24th), the sensationalism of the Quebec student magazine, Quartier Latin, does not justify the distortions of the reporter.

By quoting out of context of the magazine, he tries to prove that QL is put out by a "Lunatic fringe launching antisemitic propaganda." Whether or not you regard the staff of QL as a "lunatic fringe" is, of course, purely subjective. However, they are clearly not trying to launch antisemitic propaganda but, on the contrary, are trying to expose far right totalitarian tendencies.

They believe the popularity of such "law and order" politicians as Wagner, Drapeau and Cardinal, demonstrates the increase of authoritarianism in Quebec politics. These politicians are, in another article, compared to Hitler. This comparison is not meant to be flattering.

In the article from which the CJN reporter quotes, his quote is one of several interviews which gives the reactions of people to Wagner. The interviewers, in their introduction, note the growing world trend in "the rise of the forces of conservatism and authoritarianism." Wallace, von Thadden, the Greek colonels and, by implication, Wagner are given as illustration of this trend.

The opinion poll was against Wagner but it was not against "the Jew" Claude Wagner as the reporter states. The opinion of an antisemitic, unemployed man given along with other hard line, right wing opinions is meant to show the political climate in which such men as Wagner achieve popularity. Those quoted who are against Wagner feel he is dictatorial.

Whether or not one agrees with the QL assessment of Wagner is irrelevant. What is relevant is that the CJN reporter chose to ignore the whole and concentrate on an isolated quote.

Marilyne Glick
Toronto

From the Editors:

Reader Glick makes an erroneous assumption in thinking that the article in question labeled QL as an antisemitic journal. No such thing was done or even contemplated. The story described an article which had appeared in QL. The student magazine itself thought the references to Wagner important enough to give them prominence. So did we. Moreover, the reference to the "lunatic fringe" came in the part of our story dealing with Prime Minister Trudeau's speech about extremist elements in the Separatist movement.

STAMPS IN HONOR OF WEIZMANN INSTITUTE AND CITY ESTABLISHMENT. - One stamp which Israel issued last Monday, November 3rd, is in honor of the 25th anniversary of the Weizmann Institute of Science at Rehovot (right). Symbolic of the work done at the Institute, it bears a value of IL. 1,15 (about 34¢).

The Weizmann Institute is known throughout the world for its leadership and advances in cancer research, immunology, genetics, nuclear physics, chemistry and related subjects. Developed from the modest Daniel Sieff Research Institute, it embraces today many buildings and scientific facilities. Appropriately its 1934 founder and first president also was one of the fathers and the first president of Israel, Dr. Chaim Weizmann.

The two smaller stamps above commemorate forty-five years of the founding of Herzliya and Bnei Brak.

ASK THE RABBI

a JCNS featurette

Q. I have heard it said that if only nine men are available for a minyan, a boy under 13 can be counted towards the quorum if he puts on a tallis. What is the rule?

A. The Codifiers are divided as to whether a minor of six years of age and over can help to form the minyan, either with or without holding a Chumash in his hand. The Shulchan Aruch (Orach Chayyim 55, 4) rules that he may not, even holding a Chumash, but goes on to add that "in some communities" it is the custom to permit it in an emergency even without the Chumash. R. Abraham Gombiner (c. 1635-83) in his commentary to the Shuluchan Aruch (Magen Avraham, ad loc.) states that "nowadays" it is customary to allow the practice provided the boy holds a Chumash, but others disagree and forbid it even in emergency (see Mishnah Berurah, ad loc.). The ruling therefore is uncertain. In Anglo-Jewry it has been the practice to rely on the boy with Chumash in a real emergency. The reference by the questioner to "a tallis" is incorrect.

* * * *

Q. Are mourners during Shiva allowed to eat meat?

A. It is stated explicitly in the Talmud (Tanit 13b) that mourners are allowed to eat meat and drink wine during Shiva. Indeed, from one Talmudic passage (Nedarim 56a) it appears that it was held to be meritorious for friends to provide the mourners with meat and wine. This is based on Proverbs (31, 6-7).

* * * *

Q. I thought a minyan was needed for circumcision, but I have had notification from a London maternity hospital that only the father and grand-father will be allowed in and this has the approval of the rabbi. Is this right?

A. The Shulchan Aruch (Yoreh Deah 265, 6) rules: "Circumcision should be carried out in the presence of ten (a minyan) where this is possible but where it is not possible it may be carried out even if ten are not present".

* * * *

Q. Is Turkish delight kosher?

a. Questions of this kind can only be answered if the ingredients used are known. There is at least one firm whose Turkish delight contains no trefa but the best thing to do in such cases is to consult a rabbi or make inquiries of the manufacturers of the commodity concerned.

KEEP SMILING

LITERALLY

As Ben Gurion passed through a crowd waiting for him in front of his ministry, a small girl was heard to ask her father who the man was who was being cheered.

The father replied: "He's the head of State."

The little girl asked: "And where is the body?"

REACHED THE TOP

A four-year old was counting and when she reached 35 she began to get confused.

"That's enough already," said the proud mother. "It's really more than necessary, darling."

The child jumped up with glee. "Oh," she said. "I already know how to count more than is necessary!"

NOSEY

Returning from the hospital after undergoing an operation, a father had to spend several more days in bed at home to convalesce. Batya, his six-year old daughter, was very happy to have her daddy home again and decided to play nurse. She tied a band around her head, as she had seen the nurses in the clinic wear it, and carried a glass of fruit juice to her patient's bedside.

Father smiled and kissed her fondly.

"Daddy," asked little Batya, "did you kiss the nurses in the hospital too?"

THEN TOO

It was Hanukka and a teacher was telling her class about the meaning of the festival and about the fight of the gallant Maccabees against the oppressors. A six-year old asked: "On what side were the Americans?"

SERMON FOR THE WEEK

BRIDGING THE GAP

And it came to pass after Abraham died . . .
(Genesis 25, 11.)

After a rich and full life, Abraham, the spiritual giant of his day, had died. The man called by his contemporaries the prince of God; the man who could intercede even for the wicked people of Sodom; who was prepared to sacrifice his only son at the command of God, was now no more. What was to happen now?

True, Isaac was a living saint; goodness personified. But he was not an Abraham; not an original, creative spirit. He was the faithful conserver of a great father's tradition. But was that enough?

The same question assails us when we reflect on the great figures that illumined world history in the past; the giants of genius or near-genius who bestrode the world of their day. How small and ineffectual, in comparison, seem the men who grapple with the burning issues of our time.

The control of nuclear weapons, the stepping up of racial conflicts, the threatening population explosion and the fear of world famine a few decades hence — where are the statesmen, the men of genius, to tackle these problems before catastrophe strikes? Our generation does not seem to be producing such types. Were they killed in the great World Wars? Did they perish in the flames of the crematoria? Or are we too close to events to recognise who are our great men?

The question is an important one, and the answer seems to be indicated in the selfsame verse. "And it came to pass after Abraham died, that God blessed Isaac his son.' Isaac was not an Abraham; he could not climb the spiritual heights reached by his great father, yet he too, in his own individual fashion, achieved the blessing of God.

We are not all cast in the same mould. Some are born to create; to think great, original thoughts; to invent and to innovate. The function of others is to conserve and preserve; to provide the soil in which the seed can germinate, till a new age of giants emerges from the womb of time. There is hope and blessing even for those who are not giants, but who are willing to remain "sons of Abraham."

When the great men are with us we shift the burden on their shoulders. But when they pass on, the Isaacs must rise to the challenge in their own characteristic fashion. For if we are not giants, then we are the descendants of giants, so long as we preserve the cherished traditions handed down to us.

In spite of our shortcomings, we must bridge the gap, and create for our children the atmosphere, the environment, spiritual, cultural and educational, out of which they may find the soil for wholesome, Jewish growth.

the theatre arts

By DAVID SOHN

* The David Frost show is doing seven shows a week -- five in the States and two in London. Half of the team are Jewish. Youngest is Lynne Silver, 23, who has been with Frost for more than a year. A Londoner, product of Manchester University, she was editor of its student newspaper when it wrested from Oxbridge the coveted Sunday Mirror award for the best periodical of its kind.

After only three weeks on TV, she pulled off a major scoop last year when she was sent to Israel where she had been twice before and, against all odds, secured for Frost an interview with Moshe Dayan.

She finds working for Frost "exceptionally hectic" but says that he is an easy person to get along with. "The only time I've ever seen him lose his temper was with a taxi driver in Tel Aviv."

Another Jewish Londoner working on Frost's last series is 24-year old Roger Silverstone. After graduating from Oxford with a first in geography, he went into publishing but left after 18 months to work with Frost. He too has visited Israel, having worked there for seven months after leaving school.

Silverstone comes from an Orthodox background, feels much of the criticism of the Frost programs is justifiable. "We do tend to sensationalize but if we didn't people just wouldn't take notice.'

* Lee Strasberg, who, it was reported, is branching out with his Method schools, married again (his first wife deceased), Anna Misrachi, and at 67 started a second family. Their first child, a son, was born in August.

Last year he began a second career, conducting seminars in Los Angeles and in Paris. That encouraged him to try once again to enlarge his audience. The result is the theater institute.

If the institute is as successful as he thinks it's going to be, "I'm hoping that it can lead to creating a foundation for the studio." That, he concludes, "might lead to another theater."

* Harold Prince, producer of Fiddler on the Roof, recently cancelled a Wednesday night's performance of the musical as part of the scheduled American nationwide moratorium to protest the war in Vietnam.

For the same reason, Woody Allen didn't appear in the afternoon and evening performances of Play It Again, Sam, of which he is author and star, produced by David Merrick in association with Jack Rollins and Charles Joffe.

Prince said that while he and the writers of Fiddler -- Joseph Stein, Jerry Bock and Sheldon Harnick -- were waiving their royalties for the cancelled performance, members of the cast would be paid.

In New York alone, Fiddler grosses about $65,000 a week and averages receipts of about $6,000 for a midweek evening showing.

Prince recently resigned as a member of the American Revolution Bicentennial Commission which is planning the celebration of the founding of the United States.

* Dustin Hoffman is very much interested in Indianlore these days. Right now he is doing a Western, reliving Indian life of the 1870s.

"I was interested in this picture," Hoffman explains, "because it presents the Indian in a different light. I've seen a lot of movies but never one that's presented the Indian fairly. Most of them go along with the 'Indians are savages' theme. They really have a lot of culture.

"When they went into battle, they didn't just go in to win, but as a matter of honor -- sometimes just to touch the enemy with a coup stick. This is why they kept losing. In Custer's last battle, the Indians won because Crazy Horse and Sitting Bull made the Indians fight like white men -- to win."

To Pie Glenn, 35, meeting Hoffman and making a tape with him on Indian problems have been a real breakthrough. "It makes me feel I can help my people. Before it seemed so futile -- like hitting a stone wall."

* The Haifa Symphony Orchestra has a new conductor: Israeli born Avi Ostrovsky. He studied with Gary Bertini at the Rubin Academy in Tel Aviv and continued under a scholarship from the America-Israel Cultural Foundation under Hans Swarowsky in Vienna. In 1968 he won first prize in the Nicolai Malko Conductors' Competition in Copenhagen. He has conducted practically every orchestra in Israel as well as abroad.

IN REPERTORY.-Neil Dainard and Anna Reiser in rehearsal in Eugene O'Neill's play, Mourning Becomes Electra, at Toronto's Hart House Theater, presented with the play, Tango, by Poland's celebrated Slawomir Mrozek.

Publication of Hagada in Hungary

Budapest (JCNS). - Republication of a 211-page Hagada by Imre Keszi, a well known former Communist writer, has come as a literary and political surprise in Hungary this year.

Over and above the considerable literary value of the book, The Feast Of Those Waiting, which was first printed in 1944, its appearance poses some intriguing questions:

Why did a former Communist luminary decide to proclaim at this time his deep attachment to his Jewish identity, and why did the Hungarian regime allow at this time a second edition of such a didactically Jewish book with Zionist undertones?

The book is a loosely linked collection of ten short stories illustrating the Seder night ritual and two meditative pieces on the Seder and the coming of the Messiah. The style is a blend of Talmudic discourse, Yiddish humor and sentimental family reminiscences.

TORONTO AFTER DARK

BALLET TIME

The fall season of the National Ballet of Canada begins at O'Keefe Centre on Tuesday, November 18th, through the 29th. The premiere here is: Kraanerg, Roland Petit's triumphant success that opened Ottawa's National Arts Center. Lynn Seymour and Georges Piletta guest star in this full length ballet. Original score was created by Iannis Xenakis and Victor Vasarely; Yvarel designed the black-white op art symbolic decor.

EMINENT AUTHOR. - Author and playwright Arthur Miller, whose, The Price, opens a four-week run at Toronto's Royal Alexandra Theater this coming Monday.

RESULT OF MILLER IMPRESSION

The Price, by noted author Arthur Miller, opens at the Royal Alexandra Theater this coming Monday and will perform through Saturday, December 6th. The Price is Miller's brainchild as a result of a tour to Europe a few seasons ago when, in Germany, he was very much impressed by the courtroom proceedings of those Nazis still on trial for their parts in the annihilation of six million Jews.

MOVIES

Movies from the silent era are flourishing these days at York Public Library. Among three being presented next Thursday is Dracula (couldn't sleep when I saw it with Bela Lugosi). And, if mother and father is queried, one will discover another film is based on the life of William S. Hart, the cowboy of cowboys at the turn of the century.

RECORDING AT REVUE

Get Your Eye Off That Sparrow, an entertaining tidbit starring Almeta Speaks at Old Angelo's, has as its voice-over for the opening number, Life Cycle, a mime by Martin Frick, which was recorded by Dr. Charles Peaker, organist for the University of Toronto and for St. Paul's Anglican Church. Narration is based on Shakespeare's Ages of Man, from, As You Like It.

OVER 50 CLUB

An Over 50 Club has been opened recently by Toronto businessman, Irvine H. Williams. Plush facilities include a dining room with live music every evening, a lounge with color cable TV, club room for bridge, euchre, cribbage, chess, checkers. About 1,500 members can be accommodated; couples and singles will have a permanent place to "do their thing." Membership will merit a fashion show, art show, charter travel, theater nights, various hobby courses.

FIRST HERE

Lana Cantrell of Sydney, Australia, is in Toronto for the first time, entertaining at the Hook and Ladder Club of the Seaway Beverly Hills. She made her TV debut on the Tonight Show, belting out her first number with all the joy and zest of a young, uninhibited child. Her credits include: The Ed Sullivan Show; Kraft Music Hall; Red Skelton Show; Hollywood Palace; The Johnny Winter Showl Copacabana; Coconut Grove; The Sands in Vegas.

RAINBOW OF STARS

This Sunday afternoon and evening, B'nai B'rith, in association with Agences Productions, is presenting at O'Keefe Centre truly a Rainbow of Stars. Besides Geula Gill, the dynamic Sabra soprano, no stranger here, appearing will be Yoel Sharr, Morty Gunty, Marcella and Ravell.

Yoel Sharr, who starred in the famous, Hill 24 Doesn't Answer, can entertain in seven languages and plays six instruments. He has performed on three continents and has appeared on half-a-dozen major TV shows in the States and on radio for Kol Israel. He is known as The Israeli Danny Kay as well as The Israeli Yves Montand. Some see a resemblance between him and the late Errol Flynn -- with a goatee. Yoel is a fourth generation Sabra. He was born at Petah Tikva (the Texas of Israel).

Music is his passion. He attended Tel Aviv's Academy of Music, majoring in piano.

HIS MOVIES REVIVED.- William S. Hart, prototype of all good badmen, who is being presented in a film, among others, at Toronto's York Public Library next Thursday evening.

Announce New Healing Substance: Shrinks Piles

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissue.

In case after case, while gently relieving pain, actual reduction (shrinkage) took place.

Most important of all—results were so thorough that this improvement was maintained over a period of many months.

This was accomplished with a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue.

Now Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H. Ask for it at all drug stores. Satisfaction or your money refunded.

SHECTER, JOSEPH
The unveiling of a monument to the memory of the late JOSEPH SHECTER, beloved husband of Helen, father of Max and Mrs. Jack Stork (Rose), devoted grandfather, will take place on Sunday, November 9, at 11:45 a.m., Mount Sinai Memorial Park Cemetery, Beth Sholom Section.

THERE'S A FORTUNE IN REAL ESTATE
The Canadian Property Managers Association offer a unique course designed for the man who wants to start with about $1,000. A distinguished group of Canadian real estate specialists, notably a lawyer, a municipal assessor, an accountant, a mortgage financier, a land surveyor and others have been gathered together to show how to appraise, to finance and how to compound small holdings into huge property blocks. Many papers that come with real estate such as the Sheriff's Fee Certificate are explained. Many documents are given out during the course. You will learn how to evaluate properties and the many ways to generate capital.
These courses have run for many years in Ottawa and now you can get a complete transcript and permanent written record of everything said there. This ten week diploma course costs only $85. With each lecture relevant material is given out. This includes special leases, formal offers, mortgages and statutes. Approved by the Federal Government for Tax deduction of entire tuition.
LECTURE COURSE STARTS NOV. 17 — CALL TONIGHT
ALSO AVAILABLE BY CORRESPONDENCE — WRITE C.P.M.A., DEPT. P., 345½ BANK ST., OTTAWA

BACK TO STAR LOCALLY.-Jane Mallett, who stars in Tango, now in repertory with, Mourning Becomes Electra, at Toronto's Hart House Theater. The plays, which alternate till the 22nd of the month, are being performed partly in celebration of Hart House' fifty years.

Recipe for the week

BANANA BREAD

2 cups flour
2 tsps. baking powder
1/2 tsp. baking soda
1/2 tsp. salt
1/4 cup butter
1/2 cup sugar
2 eggs
2 med. ripe bananas, mashed
1/2 cup buttermilk or sour milk

Preheat oven to 350 deg.

Sift together the flour, baking powder, soda and salt three times. Cream butter and sugar. Beat in the eggs one at a time.

Stir the bananas into the buttermilk and add alternately with the flour mixture in the batter. Pour into a greased 9 x 5 x 3 inch loaf pan and bake about 45 minutes or until golden and done.

Yield: 1 loaf.

IS HE A HE?

by Ruthie

Here we go again. Will the real he stand up? Because now there's a new theory. Someone said that men living in apartments tend to lose their masculinity because they have nothing to do. Oh, yeah?

* * * *

We were cliff dwellers almost all our lives. And I can't picture Papa at any time as not masculine.

Okay, so he hung pictures crooked. And he didn't even know what it meant to change a washer. But what was the super for then?

* * * *

I recall how Papa used to make wine for Yom Tov (holiday). And we kids could hardly wait to help crush the grapes. Mama gave the orders; Papa did the work.

Furthermore, not being busy with outside chores, Papa had more time for us.

What'll never forget is when I used to lock myself in the bathroom whenever we had a spat. Then I was a real hero. Behind closed door I answered him back. Of course, I stayed there a long time. I was afraid to come out because I knew he was waiting just for that to let me have it, but good.

* * * *

One time I was belly-whopping on a sled just at suppertime. Call today, call tomorrow, I ignored the yells to come home.

Nu, nu, Papa wasn't the bashful kind. He came after me. And in front of everybody, did he give it to me! I can't think of a more masculine sting.

* * * *

Anyway, why did Papa have to prove anything at home? After all, he was working all week long to support his family. And it wasn't easy to leave before sunup every morning and come home fatigued every night. So what was he supposed to do then? Clean windows or polish furniture maybe? Mama was too thoughtful for that. He brought home the pay; she supervised the house. And nobody questioned Papa's manliness.

* * * *

To us kids he was the greatest. Every night he gave us a chapter of Esther Shpringenbett. And we loved it. Even Mama would listen in. And it never occurred to us who wore the pants in the family.

* * * *

Another time he saved a man's life. It happened that we lived in a lower duplex. One afternoon the landlord, who lived above us, decided to do a paint job in back of the house. Suddenly there was a yell.

The ladder tipped and the poor fellow fell flat on the ground.

Did Papa sprint! I swear, I never knew he could lift a leg let alone jump a hedge. And it was Papa's agility that got the fellow to the hospital on time.

Nu, so that doesn't show a man?

Phooey! Don't give me that apartment-home-bit psychology. A man is a man is a man -- or isn't -- anyplace.

MONTREAL NOTES

BALL

Montreal's first Ambassador's Ball under the patronage of His Excellency The Ambassador of Israel and Mrs. Evron will be held on December 31st at the Shaar Hashomayim Synagogue. Guests will include Samuel Bronfman, Q.C. and Mrs. Bronfman, C.B.E. An exhibit by Herman Perlman will be shown.

ANNIVERSARY

Beth Ora Congregation of St. Laurent will hold its 16th anniversary ball next month.

HANUKA FESTIVAL

The annual Hanuka Festival for Israel Bonds purchasers will take place in December at Place des Arts. Jo Amar and the Sarah Aviani Yeminite Trio will be featured.

CONFERENCES

Two conferences will be held next month, as has been announced by Jacob H. Lowy, president, United Israel Appeal of Canada.

The first, in early December, will be a gathering of young leadership from across Canada. The confab will mark the first occasion when young people from all segments of the country gather for two days' intensive discussion on Israel's needs. It will be addressed by Consul General, Jacob Monbaz, Israeli Ambassador Evron and Louis A. Pincus, chairman, Jewish Agency from Jerusalem. Cochairmen are Wayne Tannenbaum of Toronto and Aaron Pollack and Zave Climan of Montreal.

On the 7th and 8the of the month the first Canadian UIA conference will be convened. Campaign leaders from all Canada will deliberate and formulate plans for the 1970 campaigns. Dialogue will be held. At the gala dinner meeting, guest speaker will be Louis A. Pincus, the chairman of the Jewish Agency. Dinner also will inaugurate the 50th anniversary of Keren Hayesod. Conference chairman will be Hy Bessin of Ottawa; Stephen Berger of Toronto, cochairman.

PLAYLET

Last Sunday Shomrim Laboker Sisterhood presented a playlet sponsored by Young Israel Sisterhood of Chomedey.

DONOR LUNCH

Next Wednesday, Sisterhood of Chevra Kadisha B'nai Jacob will hold its donor luncheon.

BOOK REVIEW

Recently Sisterhood, Congregation Beth Ora, held a review of Portnoy's Complaint. Reviewer: Rabbi Morris Halpern.

GUEST SPEAKER

Quebec Education Minister Jean-Guy Cardinal will be guest speaker at a dinner in tribute to Ben Beutel tomorrow night at Shaar Hashomayim. Chairman of the dinner is Samuel Bronfman, honorary president of CJC. Beutel will be honored for 30 years dedicated leadership in the field of Jewish education in Montreal.

Sponsoring organizations are: Canadian Jewish Congress; Allied Jewish Community Services of Montreal; Association of Jewish Day Schools in Montreal.

TO BE HONORED.-Ben Chazonoff, honorary president of the Jewish Convalescent Hospital in Chomedey, Laval, who will be honored at a wine and cheese reception, Sunday afternoon, November 23rd. Guest speaker will be the Hon. Mr. Justice Harry Batshaw; prominent Jewish community leaders are on the guest list.

Among other duties, Chazonoff is a vice president of the Mount Sinai Hospital and a member of the Board of Directors of the Maimonides Hospital and Home for the Aged.

MONTREAL'S SEPHARDIC ACADEMY.-Located in a French Canadian residential area Montreal's Sephardic Academy began its operations this year. The physical facilities were obtained from The Catholic School Board at a low rental with an option to buy. The Principal of the Academy is Rabbi Abraham Edery, a product of Ashkenazi yeshivot in the United States. The Academy is an orthodox school with a modern Hebrew curriculum and in its secular program both English and French are given equal stress. Rabbi Edery also serves as the leader of Beth Avraham, a Sephardic congregation in the Cote des Neiges area.
